TAKE THE LEAD Project

Anti-Defamation League No Place for Hate[®] Overview

The Anti-Defamation League (ADL) was founded in 1913 “to stop the defamation of the Jewish people and to secure justice and fair treatment to all.” Now the nation’s premier civil rights/human relations agency fighting anti-Semitism and all forms of bigotry, ADL defends democratic ideals and protects civil rights for all. One of ADL’s most effective anti-bias programs nationwide, No Place for Hate[®] provides teachers and students the tools to build learning communities in which everyone is accepted, differences are appreciated and celebrated, and all members are encouraged to succeed. No Place for Hate[®] achieves its objective of empowering students to challenge anti-Semitism, racism, homophobia, and all forms of bigotry in their schools by providing a model for schools to respond to and prevent acts of hatred, as well as to develop projects that foster harmony and enhance mutual understanding between diverse groups.

Grant Overview

We are offering one-time grants of up to $1000 each to elementary, middle and high schools in No Place for Hate[®] schools throughout Pennsylvania and Delaware to help you plan one-time No Place for Hate[®] projects in your school. Grant proposals from high schools and middle schools must be created and implemented by students, under the guidance of an adult ally. Understanding that elementary school students are not equipped to create and implement such projects on their own, grant proposals from elementary schools must be submitted by a teacher or administrator, with student input.

Projects can be tailored to the specific needs of your school and may include cultural diversity, anti-bias and anti-bullying workshops. Sample projects can also be found in the No Place for Hate[®] Resource Guide for schools, which is available at www.noplacementforhate.org, but we strongly encourage you to be creative and develop your own original Project.

Selection Criteria

Projects must:

- be youth created and led at the high school and middle school level, with input and guidance from an adult ally at the school, OR teacher or administrator led at the elementary school level, with student input.
- meet the mission of No Place for Hate[®], which is to create more harmonious communities and classrooms by combating bias and increasing an appreciation for the richness that diversity brings. Projects should:
 - expose young people to other cultures and faiths, celebrate diversity and promote respect for differences. Ideally, projects will help young people put current events into historical context, challenge them to think critically, instill empathy and evoke a sense of "community."
 - be school-wide. Not every student needs to participate in every project, but projects should be open to all students or affect the student body as a whole; the end result must have an impact on the entire school. For example, using grant funding to simply send 10 students to the Holocaust Museum in Washington, DC, is not expansive enough to receive grant funding. However, sending 10 students to the Holocaust Museum, who will then bring back lessons to a larger audience in the school will qualify.
 - be inclusive. When planning a Project, please be sensitive to the needs or restrictions of participants. Is the event being planned for a day that would restrict participation by some students because of religious observance? Will students with special needs have access? Who may feel excluded?
 - have attainable goals and realistic budget.
