Every day we make choices. We can choose to let anti-Semitism, racism, and other forms of bigotry go unchallenged and potentially escalate, or we can choose to confront the bias that we see in our workplaces, homes, schools, and communities. As our world becomes smaller, our schools and communities more diverse, it is more critical than ever to actively build bridges to cross-cultural understanding and mutual respect.

We applaud your commitment to promoting respect and understanding for your school community.
